The Challenge

To provide a bullet-proof solution to secure on-demand data held on Windows laptop and server. The solution needed to be sufficiently resilient to be able to process files which were continually open, but also capable of protecting up to 100 GB of information. Data needed to be protected, but also be able to be distributed so that it could be accessed whilst on the road.

The Solution

After much testing of alternative solutions, the only one which was able to perform all of its functions faultlessly, including replicating open files, was Peer Software's PeerSync Workstation. Of particular interest in the solution was the configuration for a national consultancy. PeerSync resolved the problem of holding highly valuable shared files, which form the asset base of the company in a central location, and making them immediately available to consultants in the field who normally do not have access to the server. Moreover, in a file format which does not require technical know-how to access and use.

PeerSync provides powerful file mirroring, branch office synchronisation, distribution solutions and more to fulfil clients high availability needs. PeerSync allows clients to be certain that their data and applications are accessible, and protected. PeerSync provides a highly reliable IT solution for businesses. PeerSync's data retention capabilities provide high-end data backup and recovery in today's IT environments. For any type of business, PeerSync's backup capabilities protect critical data, providing an easy-to-use, reliable solution for every day data retention needs. As a business grows and requirements change, it can cost-effectively upgrade, add options, and extend solutions.

The Benefit

For the first time we found a simple to use and configure backup solution which not only backed up standard data files in known locations, but also configuration files wherever they are located on running PCs could also be distributed and protected. The result has been to make the sound reconstruction of a system after technical failure or physical loss much more likely and easy. That benefit, coupled with the ability to reproduce in an easily accessible fashion all the content of the file server while off-site, makes the task of supporting consultancy clients in the field with flexible solutions an easy task.

Case Study

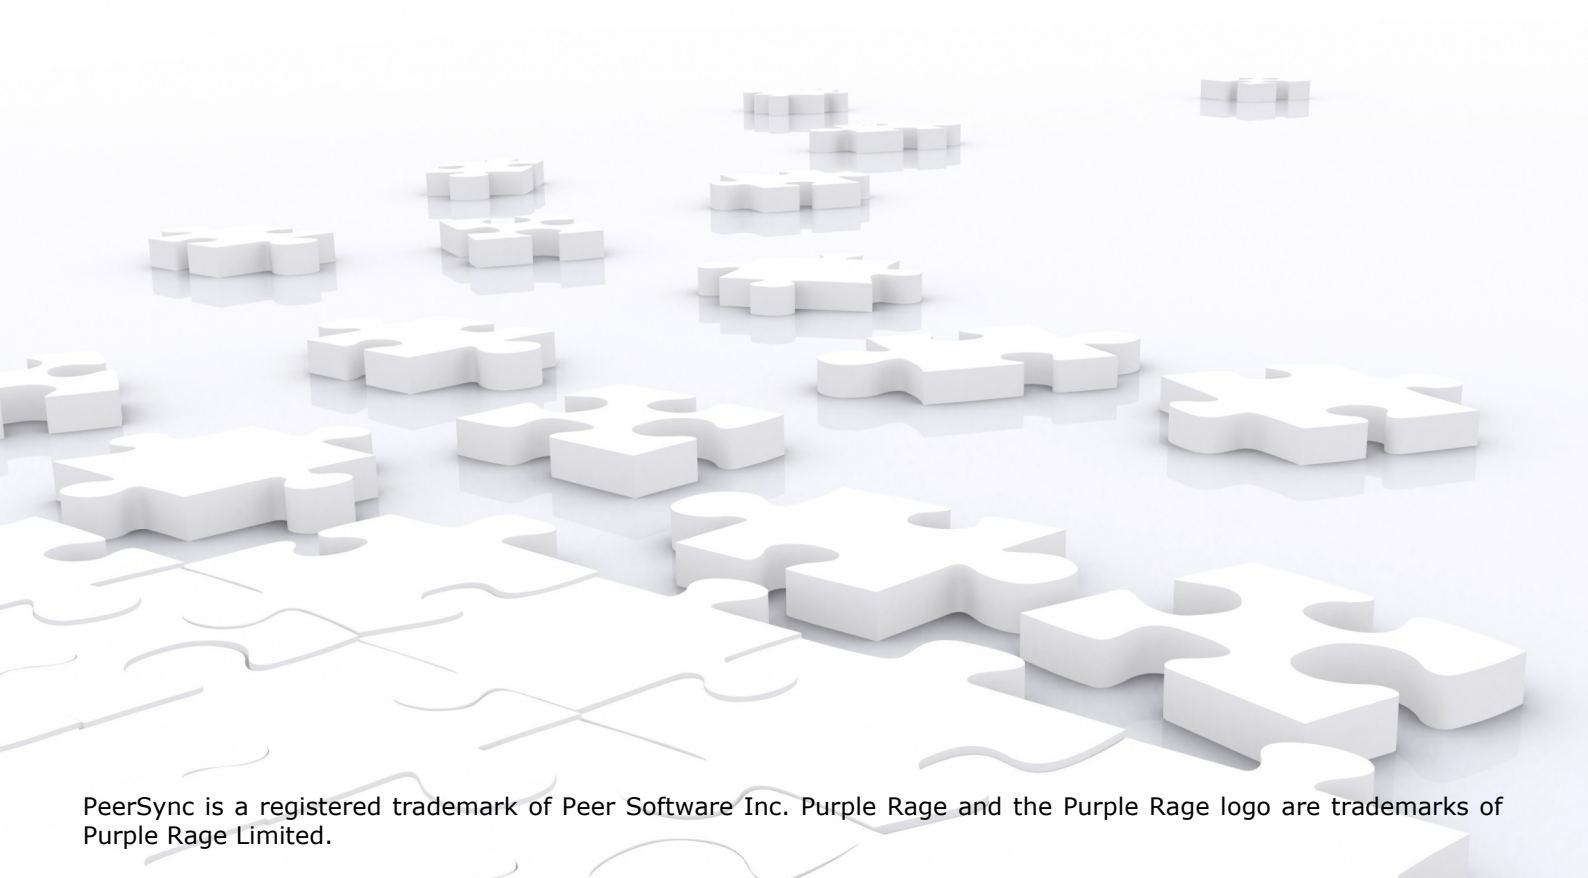

Summary

Mike Dempsey of UKQCS said "... I found it easy to use, intuitive, and it has performed flawlessly. I was able to start off with a small transfer specification, and once I had convinced myself that it worked the way I hoped it would, added the full file set specification and it worked first time and every time.

I use it for copying a full file set from my laptop and a file server onto a big Seagate USB drive, to be either taken off the premises as a security backup, and/or to make the file server files available to me on the laptop when I am away from the office. It is the only facility that I have found which seems to deal flawlessly with the open file issue. Everything else I have tried (and I have tried a lot) tripped up at some time or another over open files, often without notification. It took overnight the first time, but seconds or minutes since – excellent ..."
